Heather Macre Joins Fennemore Craig's Business Litigation Practice

PHOENIX, AZ – Fennemore Craig, a leading law firm in the Mountain West, announced that Heather Macre joined the firm as a director in its business litigation practice group and will be based in the Phoenix office. Macre was previously a partner with Aiken Schenk in Phoenix.

"I'm proud to welcome Heather to our litigation department here at Fennemore Craig," commented James Goodnow, Fennemore Craig's president and managing partner. "She brings great creativity, along with the legal acumen and experience that our clients expect when working with us, and her knowledge of the ever-changing healthcare landscape is unparalleled."

Macre's work focuses in the areas of business litigation, healthcare and bankruptcy for business clients ranging from large multinational companies to small business owners. She earned her J.D. from the University of Florida. An elected official, Macre serves on the Board of Directors for the Central Arizona Water Conservation District.

"I am very excited to join Fennemore Craig," remarked Macre. "I hope to combine my knowledge of healthcare law and my business litigation background with the team here to be able to provide our clients with innovative solutions to their legal problems."
