ANDI LEFOR

Andi Lefor is an Associate attorney who works in our firm's Natural Resources, Energy and Environmental Law practice group from the Phoenix office. Her practice focuses on regulatory matters related to water law issues in the American West.

Andi's previous experience includes representing business owners and employers in commercial litigation and transactional matters, concentrating on researching and drafting motions and pleadings. She led the discovery process for several cases, and also worked on transactional matters for her clients, including revising agreements and assisting with compliance and policy issues for a national corporation.

Born and raised in Dickinson, North Dakota, Andi watched her father be active in the community – serving on hospital boards, in the state legislature, and more – and service to others is to this day ingrained in the family. Andi hopes to continue this legacy in her career as a lawyer, in service to her clients and the broader community. She enjoys playing to her strengths: reading and writing, communication, collaborating with others, and breaking down complicated problems into strategic solutions for her clients. In law school, Andi graduated first in her class.

Away from work, Andi reads classic literature and spends as much time as possible with her husband, a songwriter and producer in the British-American trio Raynes. The couple loves to host sumptuous dinner parties, but be warned: Andi makes a strong drink.
