ANDREW T. FLYNN

Andrew Flynn is a Director in Fennemore's Business Litigation practice, where he represents companies, investors, executives, and business owners in complex, high-stakes disputes. His practice focuses on business and fiduciary litigation, including partnership and LLC disputes, fraud and securities litigation, real estate and title disputes, insurance recovery, and other business-critical matters.

A seasoned trial lawyer, Andrew has tried numerous jury trials, bench trials, and arbitrations throughout Colorado and has represented clients in courts and proceedings across the country, including in New York, Texas, California, North Carolina, and Pennsylvania. He regularly advocates for clients in state and federal courts, arbitration proceedings, and bankruptcy adversary litigation.

Andrew is particularly experienced in disputes involving complicated factual records, financial misconduct allegations, and business relationship breakdowns. He is known for distilling complex cases into clear, persuasive narratives and for guiding clients through high-pressure litigation with strategic focus and practical judgment.

Among other matters, Andrew recently served as trial counsel in a high-stakes securities fraud case involving more than $20 million in alleged damages. He also represented a national property developer in litigation arising from a multi-million dollar real estate transaction, securing specific performance after a five-day bench trial involving a valuable development property.

Andrew has also represented an international automotive and trucking company in multiple lawsuits stemming from a sophisticated embezzlement scheme. The matter involved parallel federal and state court litigation, as well as a bankruptcy adversary proceeding, and resulted in the recovery of millions of dollars for the client.

Before focusing on business litigation, Andrew represented insurance companies and policyholders in a broad range of coverage disputes and complex claims. He now leverages that experience to advise corporate policyholders on insurance recovery strategy, coverage analysis, and bad faith claims.

In addition to his litigation practice, Andrew has experience handling corporate transactions, including representing a minority shareholder in the stock redemption of a national food distribution company.
