

MARGARET GALLOGLY

Maggie concentrates her practice in water law with an emphasis on drafting and negotiating complex agreements involving natural resource issues. She represents clients on numerous aspects of water supply and development, including the negotiation of water service agreements, planning for the use and protection of water rights, obtaining Certificates of Assured Water Supply, negotiating with the Arizona Department of Water Resources, and advising clients on water legislation under consideration by the Arizona legislature.

Maggie has represented clients in the real estate development and mining industries. She has also had the opportunity to represent water providers. Over the past twenty-five years, Maggie has had a wide range of experience with Arizona's assured water supply program and the Central Arizona Groundwater Replenishment District. She is a frequent lecturer on these programs.

In addition to water law, Maggie also has experience in many aspects of real estate transactions.
