ROBERT N. KAMENSKY

Rob is a director in Fennemore's Business & Finance group where he helps companies navigate mergers and acquisitions, supply chains, software and technology agreements, as well as all manner of other day-to-day matters.

Rob has been described as "the problem prevention department." His goal is to provide legal solutions that will keep businesses running smoothly, and he aims to truly understand his clients and operations so that he can best support them. He works with businesses of all sizes, from fast-growing startups to global manufacturers, and has guided transactions worth tens of billions of dollars. Clients rely on him not only for legal guidance, but also for practical business insight and advice across industries.

Rob's background in the computer industry also provides him with a strong foundation in information security, privacy, data management, and software implementation issues.

Throughout his career, Rob has represented major global clients, including serving as key partner to several Berkshire Hathaway companies with over $2 billion in annual sales and as primary outside counsel to one of the world's largest industrial wheel and hardware manufacturers.

Rob earned his law degree from DePaul University College of Law, where he contributed to The DePaul Journal of Health Care Law, and his B.A. from the University of Iowa. He is admitted to practice in Illinois and the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois.
