

JACOB P. FREEMAN

Jacob P. Freeman is an experienced litigator recognized for his client-centric advocacy and comprehensive legal analysis. He effectively represents both plaintiffs and defendants in various high-stakes cases in federal and state courts and arbitral proceedings. Skilled in evaluating the intricacies of litigation, he often resolves disputes without formal proceedings, but is fully prepared for court when needed, handling cases from pre-complaint demands to trials and appeals. His diverse caseload includes disputes involving intellectual property, restrictive covenants, business acquisitions, and commercial leases.

Jacob started his career at Sullivan & Cromwell in New York where he focused on securities fraud and government investigations, and he later worked at Davis & Gilbert in New York, handling litigation for marketing and communications firms. He clerked for the Honorable Sandra Lynch of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit after graduating magna cum laude from Harvard Law School, where he was an editor for the Harvard Law Review. Jacob's background highlights his ability to navigate complex legal scenarios.

Jacob is a native of Western Washington, and thus grew up in a pair of hiking boots. In his free time, Jacob still enjoys camping and hiking, as well as bird watching.
