

BRIAN NADLER

Brian Nadler is an attorney based in Fennemore's Seattle office who represents businesses and other clients in commercial litigation and advises on appeals and appellate strategy. His practice spans the full litigation lifecycle, including pleadings, discovery, dispositive motions, settlement negotiations, appellate briefing, and oral argument. Brian handles complex disputes involving commercial and construction law, environmental liability, easements, defamation, civil contempt, and products liability.

Brian has extensive appellate experience in Washington state and federal courts. He has briefed matters before state and federal appellate courts and presented oral argument before the Washington Court of Appeals and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. His appellate practice includes representing litigants in appeals and preparing amicus briefs on behalf of construction-industry organizations, including Associated General Contractors of Washington, the Mechanical Contractors Association of Western Washington, and the National Utility Contractors Association of Washington.

Brian's appellate experience includes matters involving Washington contractor and commercial law, construction disputes, environmental liability, easements, defamation, civil contempt, and products liability. His selected results include reversing an adverse easement ruling and affirming the dismissal of prescriptive easement and defamation claims.

Before entering private practice, Brian served as a law clerk to the Honorable Thomas O. Rice of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Washington. His judicial experience provides additional perspective on federal litigation, legal analysis, and appellate advocacy.

Outside the office, Brian enjoys staying connected to his California roots by cheering for the Sacramento Kings and San Francisco 49ers. He also enjoys competing in triathlons, spending time outdoors with his wife and son, and raising their two Australian Shepherds, Sierra and Bran.
