ROSE MCCORMICK

Rose McCormick is a business litigation associate at Fennemore. She assists businesses and individuals with complex commercial litigation matters. Rose conducts detailed legal research, prepares litigation briefs and memoranda, and develops practical legal analysis to help clients evaluate risks and pursue effective strategies.

Before joining Fennemore, she served as a legal extern with the Colorado Attorney General's Office's Criminal Appeals Section, where she researched and drafted appellate briefs and helped prepare for oral arguments. She also served as a judicial extern to a justice of the Colorado Supreme Court, preparing certiorari memoranda and observing and discussing oral arguments, and as a judicial extern with the 18th Judicial District, where she reviewed motions and drafted proposed orders.

At the University of Denver Sturm College of Law, she participated in the Natural Resources and Environmental Law Society, competed in the National Environmental Law Moot Court Competition and contributed to the Tribal Wills Project, helping draft wills for members of the Ojibwe tribe. She also earned a Certificate in Legal Research.

In her free time, Rose wake surfs, hikes, and plays sand volleyball.
