ALEX OKUN

Alex Okun is a business litigation associate at Fennemore in Seattle, Washington. He supports complex commercial litigation matters involving electronically stored information (ESI) discovery, business torts, trademark disputes, insurance claim assignments, and related litigation issues.

Alex's experience includes researching legal questions, preparing office memoranda, drafting litigation documents, and reviewing case materials for factual consistency and issues requiring clarification. He has also worked on landlord-tenant matters, contract and property law, federal disability protections, subsidized housing programs, and environmental disclosure requirements.

Before joining Fennemore, Alex served as a consulting paralegal on a technology transactions team, where he supported cross-border corporate matters involving powers of attorney, annual meetings, entity formation and liquidation, and international capital investments. He earned his J.D. from the University of Washington School of Law and his B.A. in Government from Wesleyan University. He has moderate proficiency in Russian and beginner proficiency in Spanish.
